Jennifer L'Arrivee (B.Sc. M.Ed)

Jennifer has been involved with border collies and sheep since the mid-90's. She has worked as a contract shepherd managing flocks of 1000 -1500 sheep and trained both pet dogs and herding dogs. She currently lives on a 65-acre farm in the Robson Valley with her husband, dogs and sheep and she teaches secondary school science and math.

In 2011, Jennifer fulfilled a lifelong goal of competing in sheep dog trials in the UK. She and her husband spent 2 months in Wales and competed in over 20 trials in southern Wales and England. Jennifer & Kinloch Bee even earned several placings, despite only working as partners for a couple of weeks. The team then went on to compete for Canada at the World Sheep Dog Trial in Lowther, England.

“A properly trained sheep dog should be able to move the sheep quietly and purposely. Their movements should flow.”

Jennifer enjoys training all levels of working border collies and emphasizes the importance of treating the sheep properly. She has taught clinics throughout British Columbia, Alberta, Nova Scotia and Ontario.
